Aetna Casualty & Surety Co., supra, the Ohio court, in ruling on the same question, said: "It is true that no contract of insurance, as such, is binding until the insurer accepts or refuses to accept the application. The policy of insurance takes effect only upon such acceptance. (Ohio cases) In the absence of acceptance of the application, the insurer is not liable for the policy. The application is a part of the contract, which need not be signed by the insured. (O.R.C. § 3903.04) As was said in the DeFord case, supra: 'The policy of insurance in force * * * when the accident occurred became effective upon the delivery of the policy and continued until canceled in accordance with the terms thereof. The policy was a contract binding * * * (sic) both parties when the accident occurred. The insured and the insurer were free to agree that the policy should take effect at a future time, and for that purpose to insert in the policy a provision to that effect.'
