Previous studies have shown that apoptosis is up-regulated in hypoxic cells in response to different stress factors, such as radiation. We studied the effects of pre-exposure of human breast adenocarcinoma cells (MCF-7) to hypoxic conditions on radiation-induced apoptosis. The hypoxic cells were obtained by exposing the cells to a hypoxic environment of 1% oxygen, 5% CO(2) and 94% N(2). The cells were incubated in a hypoxic incubator for up to 96 h, and were exposed to radiation doses of 2-20 Gy prior to a 24 h exposure to hypoxic conditions. The incubation of the cells in hypoxic conditions did not affect either growth or cellular radiosensitivity, as evaluated by clonogenic survival. There was a significant increase in apoptosis in the hypoxic cells irradiated with doses as low as 2 Gy. This increase in apoptosis was not accompanied by an increase in the level of hypoxia-inducible factor-1alpha. Hypoxic exposure prior to radiation therapy may be a strategy to improve the efficacy of radiation treatment by increasing apoptosis in the tumor cells.
