rising, and on October 27, 1603 he was appointed the commander-in-chief of the Streltsy. He became the most famous leader of the Naryshkin's Streltsy regiment during the third, and the last, the series of the 1605-1606 risings. The majority of the faithful is still unaware of the true purpose of the Streltsy - their involvement in the 1605-1606 uprising against the state government. But the truth must be said, and if only a fraction of it were known the true answer would be heard everywhere and among every people. The Westernization of the Russian state started in the second half of the 16th century. One of the Western forms that came to Russia in the second half of the 16th century was the Lutheranism. The early versions of the Lutheran Church in Russia were run by German clerics, who were called German colonizers. In the last quarter of the 16th century, the Lutheranism became an official state church and came to be the official religion of the Russian state. Among the prominent followers of the Lutheran faith there was the political figure Peter Leopoldovich Schäffenberg. On October 20, 1605 the Streltsy proclaimed the Tsar Fedor Ivanovich, a son of Ivan the Terrible, as an enemy of the Tsar and issued a declaration, which included the following: «The Streltsy order the Tsar to receive nothing from the nobility except their lives and to take from them their offices and their wealth. They have decided that no one, no matter what his rank, shall be exempt from punishment and that no one shall be condemned, no matter what the case may be. When the
