There are many different kinds of games that can be played at casinos. Most of these games are based on the same basic rules and are played for the same reason: to have a good time. No matter what type of game is being played, the object of the game is to try and beat the dealer. Most games consist of cards or chips that are placed on a table in front of the player. Some of the more popular games are: roulette, keno, craps, dice, blackjack, poker and baccarat. Each game has its own unique rules that people can follow to achieve their goal. Some games, however, are usually played by groups of people who join together to play against the dealer. The people in these games are called the players. The dealer, on the other hand, is usually a person who is paid to take care of the cards, chips, and money that is used to pay for the games. Table games are a type of game that is usually played by individuals and are often accompanied by the casino dealer. There are many different types of table games but all have a few things in common. For example, each game usually has a specific set of rules that define how the game is played. Each game may also have a predetermined point value. Some games also have special prizes or bonuses for the winner. Roulette, for example, may have special prizes for players who win. Most table games are played with a wheel that has various numbers on it. The wheel is usually covered by a cloth and is placed in front of the dealer. After the wheel is spinning, the dealer usually removes the cloth from the wheel and displays the winning number to the players. Any bets that are placed with the numbers displayed on the wheel are played at the number displayed. Each game usually has a certain number of rounds. Usually the rounds are repeated until the game is over and the players have won or lost. Since the game of baccarat is played with chips and there is not a wheel involved, there is no round to be repeated. The object of the game of baccarat is to have the best hand when the final card is dealt. The player with the best hand gets the money. The object of the game of poker is to win by playing hands that you think will be the best when all the cards are dealt. Some hands have special names because of how they are played. For example, the straight flush hand means that you have all five cards of the same suit. The value of these
