MergeSplit PDF is a practical.NET library specially designed for developers who need to merge multiple PDF documents. With just a few lines of code, you can merge several different documents into one big PDF file or split one big PDF file into a number of documents. The documents can be parts of the same document or individual documents in the same folder. You have many different ways to work with your documents: You can for example split them into separate files, remove pages, merge files in a folder, or search particular pages. The technique which is the most useful for each case depends on the problem. For example if you need to combine one single PDF document into a single PDF file, you have to use the MergeDocuments method of MergeSplit PDF. If you need to combine multiple PDF files into one big document, you need to use the MergeDocuments method. If you need to split a single PDF file into a number of new files, you have to use the SplitDocuments method. The PDF documents are stored in an uncompressed stream. So you do not need to save the PDF files to file. You can for example work with this stream directly. After all, the stream can store multiple pages. If you need to print out the PDF file, you can define the size of your printed pages manually. The algorithm which is used for the compression is Zip. It is a great algorithm for compressing files. Apart from the Zip compression, MergeSplit PDF also includes the LZMA and XZ compression algorithms. And besides, MergeSplit PDF has a lot of features. Here they are: Key Features: Split documents in various ways. Update of PDFs. Changes of PDFs. Differences between the selected documents. Control of the size of the created PDFs. Changes of the pages. The PDFs are stored in an uncompressed stream. PDF compression by zip and other algorithms. Improvements of PDFs. Navigation of PDFs. PDF searching.
