VirtualDesktopSwitcher

If you have ever tried to switch between applications in Windows with the help of the default Win + Tab key combo, then you have probably faced the following issue: You are not able to launch a new instance of the application you are currently working on. You can, however, take advantage of the new virtual desktop feature available in Windows 10 and switch between virtual desktops using the mouse scroll. If you are interested in adding this feature to your workflow, then you should give VirtualDesktopSwitcher a try. What's New: This release features a number of new functionality enhancements. You can now open a new instance of a program by clicking on the desktop then pressing the Alt + Enter key combo. The single-click open feature is now default on all available desktop skins. The program now features a new start menu that is based on the theme selected. The default theme is now white, so if you don't like it, you can easily change it to anything you like. VirtualDesktopSwitcher has a handful of new skins to choose from. You can select from three desktop themes, two icon themes, and three color palettes. You can also easily remove unwanted applications from the menu. Unlike the previous skins, there is no dark menu option. Instead, you can download and install new skins for the program using the included theme manager. In addition to the desktop skins, you can now select from a few custom skin layouts. These layouts are customizable and can be used to simply change the default look and feel of the app. There is also a new folder skin for the program. This can be used to change the look and feel of the desktop menu.
