Having a hard time seeing the little boxes for the type of boxes that you can use. The Firefox browser is known for its efficient support of HTML5, JavaScript and CSS, as well as its impressive speed and user interface. Its latest version, Firefox 14, released for Windows, Mac, and Linux, is yet another example of what the browser can do. With the HTML5 specification now adopted by all major browsers, Firefox should now be a fast and smooth user experience for your browsing sessions. For example, if you have a website that is rich in media elements, Firefox will be able to use the HTML5 tag (used to play videos) or (used to play sound). Similarly, the HTML5 tag (used to display images) will allow Firefox to have an easier time dealing with its capabilities. Moreover, you can now easily see notifications from your favorite websites and even other applications. With the Web Notifications API, Firefox is able to notify you when a new mail arrives, or when a particular website has just updated their content. This is especially useful for those who frequently use their browser as a mailbox. Other notable changes include the addition of a development timeline and mobile app performance improvements.
