SniperEliteV2keyserialnumber Where can I get an undetectable pen? This is a sequel to [[The Day After Tomorrow|The Day After Tomorrow]] and has been in production since late 2004. How are you supposed to feel when your best mate's actually made a sequel to [[The Day After Tomorrow|The Day After Tomorrow]]? Comment or post on the video Great picture! Currently there is no good sequel to [[The Day After Tomorrow|The Day After Tomorrow]]. Awesome picture! That's a question. Battle Royale is a horror film about a school of a thousand juvenile delinquents who are given nuclear weapons and ordered to kill each other, in order to see who survives. The year is 2019 and if you think about it, the actors in this movie must be 30-50 years old. No-one would still be playing teenagers in 2014, right? That's like getting washed up on a beach in 1969. Please take this into consideration before taking a look at this spoiler-free review. This movie starts out with an excellent premise. You've got this school of totally unruly, misfit delinquents. They've won a nuclear-equipped boat from some military simulation and because they can't get any better, they're forced to use the nukes on each other. The loser is the last person standing. Battle Royale is not a usual coming-of-age movie. The entire story takes place over 72 hours and then you're left in shock at what you've just seen. It's a stupid movie with a brilliant concept. The concept behind Battle Royale is: what if you force a bunch of teenagers to fight each other to the death? The twist is that you set them in the middle of an abandoned island. Battle Royale is a quirky, cool movie. It's got its share of sweet moments and awkard moments, but that's true of almost everything. The premise is awesome. You've got all these young people getting bored of life and basically seceding into a community. An enormous amount of energy is required to keep these kids fighting each other to the death. It's a weird movie. There's nothing like it. It's so different and original. This is also the first film since 1980's Escape from New York that begins by showing a man freezing to death. So the body horror aspect is awesome. This film is an
