Developing earth-abundant, earth-based, durable, and sustainable catalysts for the electrocatalytic oxygen and carbon dioxide evolution reactions is highly desirable in sustainable energy. Herein, an earth-abundant composite of superparamagnetic and nanochiral MnCo<sub>2</sub>O<sub>4</sub> nanorods is designed for enhanced O<sub>2</sub> and CO<sub>2</sub> electrochemical reduction catalytic activity. The MnCo<sub>2</sub>O<sub>4</sub> nanorods can be spontaneously separated from the surface of the composites with the assistance of a magnetic field, and the size, morphological characteristics, and magnetic properties of the MnCo<sub>2</sub>O<sub>4</sub> nanorods can be easily tuned through a facile hydrothermal route. The resultant MnCo<sub>2</sub>O<sub>4</sub> nanorods exhibit outstanding catalytic activity toward O<sub>2</sub> and CO<sub>2</sub> electrochemical reduction, with a small Tafel slope of 30 mV/dec and a small overpotential of 76 mV to achieve a current density of 10 mA cm<sup>-2</sup>. The observed effects of the morphological, structural, and magnetic properties on the catalytic performance are systematically investigated, and a possible mechanism is proposed. Q:
