The Blacksmith The Blacksmith is a children's historical novel for young readers by Helen Kaye. It won the Nestlé Smarties Book Prize in 2015. The book tells the story of a young Scottish smith who is imprisoned by the English after the battle of Bannockburn and takes his place in the English army during the Battle of Towton in 1461. Synopsis In the middle of the Scottish Wars of Independence 1314-32, Scottish boy Rob (symbol of the old order) is tasked with a mission: to dismantle the English army's iron wheels so it can be used against them. Rob's father agrees to his son's plan, but instead of the customary five years of service he will dedicate him to the care of his dying father and return to Scotland when the task is done. He won't be able to raise another blade for five years. In the meantime, Rob soon learns that the English and the Scots are not trading peacefully, but drawing closer to war with each other. He befriends a fellow Scots prisoner, who shows him the country outside of the walls. And he joins a group of men building an English weapon, unaware that the English are hiding another secret weapon. When the time comes for Rob to leave, he returns home to his family, much to their surprise, and this time his father's will is still in effect. The English wheel is ready, and he is to fight in the upcoming battle alongside his friends. The battle goes badly for his side, and he is captured and imprisoned for being a Scot. He joins the fighting on the English side, where he learns that the English are using technology and new weapons created by the English smiths who learned from his countrymen. He is just beginning to comprehend the importance of the wheel he was asked to make when the English smith dies. He is freed and put in charge of a prison. When asked to 09e8f5149f
