I want to remove the blue border that appears between the selected ListViewItem and the header. Can I do that? A: When creating the view for the ListView, you can set the SelectedItemBackColor property to the same as the e.NewSelectedObject back color. This is the border that you are seeing. The ItemContainerStyle is set by the view model. This allows you to pass in an alternative style for all the ListView items, rather than the styles being hardcoded into the View. public class MyItemStyle : DataTemplate { public static readonly DependencyProperty MySelectedItemColorProperty = DependencyProperty.Register("MySelectedItemColor", typeof(Brush), typeof(MyItemStyle), new PropertyMetadata(Brush.FromKnownColor(KnownColor.Highlight), OnSelectedItemColorChanged)); public Brush MySelectedItemColor { get { return (Brush)GetValue(MySelectedItemColorProperty); } set { SetValue(MySelectedItemColorProperty, value); } }

I want a function like this: function out(s...) { s.slice(0,2); } I can use function out("abcde"); to make code like this abcde or abc If I use function out(["abc","def"]); to make code like this: abcdef or abc def I have a problem: abcdef [1] is the number of elements in array. A: Here is an example of slicing the string by character indices: > "abcdef".slice(2) 'abc' And another for slices by substrings: > "abcdef".slice(2, 3) 'ab' Another option is to use slice(start, stop) to copy everything up to the first stop-point, or slice(start, end) to copy everything between the first and second stop-point. That's all, I guess. Prevalence of asthma and bronchial hyperresponsiveness in Asian Indians. To estimate the prevalence of asthma and bronchial hyperresponsiveness in Asian Indians. In this cross-sectional survey, the prevalence of asthma and bronchial hyperresponsiveness was determined in 5,461 individuals aged 20 years or more in the New Delhi city area in India. History of asthma was obtained from each individual. Mucosal responsiveness to histamine was measured in a subset of individuals who had a history of asthma. The overall prevalence of asthma in the survey population was 3.9% (
