Preliminary evaluation of strontium-titanium implants placed in the anterior maxilla: a multicenter study. To evaluate the use of strontium-titanium implants in the anterior maxilla. Twenty-five patients received one or two implants in the anterior maxilla. Each patient received a single barbed implant having a diameter between 3.75 and 4.75 mm, for a total of 59 implants (n = 59). In 14 patients, the implants were placed in the sinus region; in 11 patients, the implants were placed between the central incisors and canines. The average follow-up was 7.3 months. Implants were examined with fluoroscopy for mobility and peri-implant probing for bleeding on probing. Forty-seven of the 59 implants were followed for 2 years. Thirty-two patients had no implants placed or lost in the anterior region; 15 patients had implants replaced or lost. From this preliminary evaluation, all implants were successful, and no adverse soft tissue reactions were observed./* * Copyright Elasticsearch B.V. and/or licensed to Elasticsearch B.V. under one * or more contributor license agreements.
