Photo Editing in Photoshop Adobe Photoshop is a layer-based program, which means that most features can be used by non-technical users with a bare minimum of knowledge. There are a variety of ways to improve photos in Photoshop. Adobe provides tutorials for both users who have completed courses and those who have not. The following sections explain some basics of layers and a basic editing process. Introduction to Layers To edit a photo in Photoshop, you need to place the elements of an image on separate layers. Before you start creating new layers, make sure that you have layers already in place. All layers are separate and editable. When you use a layer, you increase or decrease its opacity. Each layer can have different filters applied, a drop shadow, or a gradient map to enhance its appearance. Once you have a photo layered, you can adjust its size, contrast, color, and other editing options. To create a new layer, right-click the layer that you want to edit and select "New Layer." Creating Layers There are several ways to create layers. You can simply choose File > New. When you create a new file, Photoshop creates an empty file and opens it. Right-click the blank canvas and select "Layer," then click "New" to create a new layer. You can also use the layers palette (Figure A) to select layers and create new layers. Use the layers palette to create new layers in the Layers palette (Figure A). Figure A: The Layers palette allows you to select the layers in the photo, reorganize them, and create new layers. You can also select layers that you've created by choosing Layer > Layer from the menu bar (Figure B). This opens a window that allows you to select layers. Select the layer and click the "New Layer" button. Figure B: Select layers and create new layers from the Layers palette. To use the Layer palette to select layers, right-click the layer and select "Layer." Add Layers Adding a new layer will give you more control over the content of the layer. For example, if the image is too low in resolution, adding a new layer gives you the ability to add background. Photoshop has two types of layer menus. The first type creates the new layer when you select it. To add a new layer, select the layer you want to edit

Thanks for your help! A: Looks like you are trying to get all records from Sales table for order with id = 43. But you have added WHERE clause with OrderID which is ambiguous.
