CS:GO may be the most popular first person shooter (FPS) in the world today. Ever since its release in August 2012, the game has been a hit.Cooking with the Stars: Jean-Georges Vongerichten It was the beginning of our close friendship, and to this day, it remains our secret code for knowing each other. I spent the summer of my 20s living in the Union Square apartment of a few close friends. My parents felt compelled to visit every so often, posing me with the opinionated Mr. Rogers-esque neighbors who wanted to know about my life. I was impressed by their worldliness and curiosity, but I was coming of age, and they didn't quite know what to make of this college kid with a skateboard and a "college boy" cigarette habit. So, they told me about these new restaurants, showing me their menus and pointing me to some of the greatest food in the world. I was hooked. When I moved to New York City, I decided that if I ever had my own restaurant, I would center the menu around local and seasonal ingredients. That led me to cook with Jean-Georges Vongerichten. When I arrived at Jean-Georges' s Chelsea restaurant, I knew who I wanted to work with, but I didn't realize how important his help would become to me. Most chefs that I've met would panic at the suggestion of having someone help them cook. Jean-Georges is the complete opposite. His staff is an extension of him, and he would make it his job to see that you had the right tools at the right times, and not just one set of crayons. I wanted that from him, so I know it's that kind of attitude that made the relationship work. I started at the restaurant in 2003. At the time, the menu had only 14 things, and it was more a tasting menu than a regular menu. I worked side-by-side with Jean-Georges and the crew, and it was remarkable to watch them close up shop and make room for me. They made me their chef de cuisine. I got to watch them all come together as one cohesive unit and prepare one of the best meals I've ever tasted. It's a great feeling to know that every person on the line cared about what he or she was doing, and was so proud of the end product. I recall my days as a young chef very well because

He recalled the ordination of the first Jesuit pope: "The popes who began their pontificate as hermits or monks, after a conversion of life... before them, did not go through that experience. Nor did the popes who entered their office after the Second World War, when everything was difficult, and in fact they also lacked a theological and pastoral formation. But when
