The best way to truly master Photoshop is through proper training from a professional photographer with years of experience in using the program, but if you're eager to learn the basics you'll find all the tools you need to get off the ground in this chapter. Figure 1-1 shows Photoshop's default workspace. Photoshop Elements There are three versions of Photoshop that are part of the Elements line. These are the versions that you should purchase if you're serious about learning to create sophisticated photo editing projects. In Figure 1-1, the Elements version is third from the left and is the gray toolbox. A full version of Photoshop also includes a version of Elements. An image in Elements can be used as a template for the full version. Even if you don't actually make any changes to the image when you use Elements, the program automatically updates the image with the changes you make. Photoshop touch In addition to the desktop version Photoshop and Elements, Adobe offers Photoshop touch. Photoshop touch is designed to work on the iPad and iPhone. It allows you to access the image editor without a mouse by touching a finger on the screen for interactive editing. You can use Photoshop touch to edit your camera RAW and JPEG images when you have a free version of the software. However, you're required to purchase the full version if you want to do any advanced image editing. Photoshop touch allows you to edit your JPEG images, and in the future, Photoshop for Mac and Windows may include the capability to edit RAW images with touch as well. However, right now, it's limited to JPEG images. Figure 1-1: This is what the default Photoshop workspace looks like. Knowing Your Way Around the Work Space Although the default Photoshop workspace may look familiar, you can customize it, as shown in Figure 1-2. Figure 1-2: The image in the background is the layer content. Understanding the workspace You may not realize it, but most of the elements of Photoshop's workspace are relative. That is, the controls and features on the workspace are all related to the size and shape of the image and the size and shape of your monitor. So what exactly does the shape of the workspace represent? Think of your monitor as a flat box. The top left corner of the flat box represents the upper left corner of your monitor. The lower right corner represents the lower right corner of the flat box.

The Labneh Love Affair Posted by: infoplus The Spring that has finally arrived is accompanied by a new suitor. Lavender has always been a romantic lot. We are drawn to flowers that not only smell pretty, but also remind us of grace and gentleness. It's no wonder that, given the affinity between the two, we would be so fond of their marriage...so much so that we would celebrate it with sweets and tea, and share it with our kids. "In the Jewish tradition, 'labneh' means "cheese" and 'tahina' is "oil"... It is as essential as it is delicious." Labneh is a fresh cheese made of soured milk. It is usually kneaded by hand, as it is easy and less time consuming. But it can also be done with an electric mixer. The colour is translucent, with a mild, almost nutty flavour. It has a soft and spreadable consistency. Generally, you will find labneh in mixtures with other food products, and is often found in sweets. In the Jewish tradition, "labneh" means "cheese" and "tahina" is "oil." It is as essential as it is delicious, the best food for the soul. Traditional and delicious. This is how Labneh is described by many. It's not false, as labneh is a delicious food product. Yet it has travelled a long way to reach you. We've added such a long list of recipes that let you taste different ways to prepare it. Enjoy it! We are sure that labneh will satisfy even the pickiest mouth. "Israeli labor heritage says, we will love and support the labneh artisans" Labneh is a real labour of love. It is the artisans of Israel who create it. The labneh history is not as simple as it may seem. If you want to watch your children eating labneh from their very first bite, you should know that the labneh artisans learn the art of making labneh from their mothers. They are taught the same way and grow in the same environment of kindness, love and care, all the way from their mothers who first taught them how

What's New In Adobe Photoshop Cs2 Official Download?

Americans are scared. They are worried about their jobs, about the economy, about terrorism. It's not just Democratic voters who are scared. Republicans are worried, too. And that's good. President Obama's approval numbers are historically low. He may be seen as the politician who is governing for the majority, but Americans believe that his policies are hurting them. "The main reason why I'm for Obama's reelection is because I don't think I'd be able to trust Romney as president," said Nancy Demaree of Bitter Springs, a small farming town in Kentucky. "I like Obama. I feel that he's been able to change a lot of things that had been in the way," she added. "We've got to change the way we've been doing business, and Obama's trying to do that. We've got to take a different approach." Nancy and her family, like many Americans, are not familiar with Mitt Romney. They don't know how he would run the country. They can see how he's run his business life, though, and they don't like it. Mitt Romney lost the Latino vote by more than 40 points. He alienated the black community by emphasizing "self-deportation." His disapproval ratings are soaring. Some Republicans are praying for a political meltdown, hoping that a new candidate will emerge and capture the party's base. That's ridiculous. The best argument Mitt Romney has for the presidency is that he has been a successful businessman. If Americans feel that he is not the best candidate for the job, they have the chance to find somebody better. Sometimes, a candidate comes along who is a fresh face and a newcomer. He or she might come from the grass roots of politics. We can do without the current crop of politicians. The idea that they can play a part in the presidency in 2012 is silly. At the same time, many Americans are worried about a second term of President Obama. They are not convinced that Obama's ideas will bring about the changes they desire. They aren't impressed by Obama's agenda. They think that he will govern for the minority. That's what Americans think about
