1. Using the File menu, navigate to the Print submenu and choose Image Print. You see the Photoshop Print dialog box, shown in Figure 1-3. Figure 1-3: Use the Print dialog box to easily control printing options. 2. Click the Color tab at the top of the dialog box. The Color tab, shown in Figure 1-4, controls color output settings. 3. From the Page Range drop-down menu, select Photo as the Print media type. This option specifies that the image to print should be printed on a physical 8.5-inchx11-inch printed page. (You can also use the Picturable Style feature in Photoshop to do the same thing.) 4. Choose a page range from the 1 to 99 (or 100) setting. 5. Click OK to print. In the Print dialog box, you have more control over the Print Quality options, but use the Color tab to adjust the color settings and Page Range to create a printed page. The Color options are shown in Figure 1-5. Figure 1-4: The Color tab enables you to adjust a printed photo's color settings. Figure 1-5: Make sure the quality settings for your photo are acceptable. 6. Click OK to close the Print dialog box. If you're asked to use a printer that supports duplex printing (pages printed on both sides of the page), choose the Duplex Printing option. This setting will return a signed OCR-B (Laminated) version of your print. Prints made without the OCR-B setting are a single, signed copy.
