Per custom, hyper-quick passing animations have been added to the game. Specifically, in motion capture mode, pressing the R2 button will make the athlete react to the pass with a unique, bent-knee, leg-swinging animation. In addition, movement has been added to corner kicks. The player taking the corner kick will react to the kick with proper movement, allowing for powerful close control plays. In addition to new animations, the people at Visual Concepts have been busy fine-tuning gameplay moments to the minute. For example, different goals react differently to being struck at different parts of the ball’s surface. According to Visual Concepts, the most striking, realistic goal they’ve seen so far is in the demo, which got smashed through the back of the goal. The player stayed on his feet, but when he hit the stationary post, his entire right foot rotated up to hit the post in real life. New items have been added to the game as well. For example, players can now carry a ball for added control. In addition, dribbling with the analogue stick is now quicker. Players can no longer dribble out of the penalty area but, rather, can lose their possession there. The return of “swipe tackles” has been added. In the demo, the player gets in one touch with his opponent’s leg to initiate a tackle that sends them sprawling. The move has been a staple of FIFA for many years and is important to making the game feel authentic. As for gameplay features, the new Momentum System provides a new measure of control for both dribbling and heading the ball. Players can boost their momentum by dragging their analog stick left and right. If the player holds the stick left, he will step out and dribble left. If the player holds the stick right, he will step back to accelerate before heading the ball. The Dynamic Tactical AI uses a new artificial intelligence algorithm to orchestrate the team’s attacks and defence. In addition, Teammates running in and out of the player’s control is a thing of the past. The demo showed the player controlling a completely different teammate. A huge difference was visible when using the analogue stick to drag players with the left stick. The AI teammates would manage to find their way back to the player, while bringing another teammate with them. In more detail,
