Welkom van welkom Main menu Tag Archives: of I have been doing some research on desert locations all around the world. Some of the more extreme ones in case you are looking for a place to relocate in northern Australia, western US, or northern Africa. I thought I would share some of the far-flung discoveries I made over the past year or so. You can checkout all of my desert environments by using the links at the bottom of the post. Somebody does a lot of research on which states have the best and worst job growth. However, I found some interesting facts about a few states that aren't taken into consideration. Some of my findings include North Dakota as number one, New Hampshire as number two, Alaska as number three and New Mexico as number four. In another post, I came across a study that shows what the most popular and least popular states in America would be based on what men and women are looking for in a relationship. I chose to focus on New

Ra Townies In an attempt to write a book on my walks, and hoping that it wouldn't be a book in the Dickensian sense, I recorded a few walks in late May and early June in 2011. I am now looking at the data I collected and wondering about its implications for the way I see my place, and how I relate to it. Firstly, the sample of walks was limited to the neighborhoods around our house. It was a mix of long and short walks, each of them taking around two hours (including breaks and meals). I would have taken more walks had I not had business to attend to in the store. The walks themselves were not restricted to any particular plan or route - we simply walked our neighborhood, selecting the routes we most liked, and taking our time. Most were short, averaging one and a half to two miles, but there were also several long walks. The walks were recorded using a GPS handheld device. Each walk took me between 15 and 30 minutes, and I noted where we were, what we saw, and what we thought of it at the time. The data yielded very structured notes, such as “Towel Grove”, or “Towel Grove Mall”, or “The Bowl”. I realized that, when we walked, we were very much in each other’s company, and that I was also using our walks as a way of writing my own book. I then read my notes and began to combine them into a simple story about the neighborhood. It’s intended as a story about ordinary life in the suburbs, in which we are
