Auto-color tools One of Photoshop's most popular features is its _auto-color tools,_ which enable you to color correct images. You can use these tools to correct a color balance, tone down or increase exposure, and sharpen an image. These tools don't replace the color correction found in other programs, such as Lightroom or Capture NX2, but they do allow you to do it quickly and automatically. When you choose the Auto Color tool from the Edit menu (Figure 4-7), the program automatically analyzes an image and adjusts it so that it is as close as possible to the preset color "standard." Most of the time, you can use the default settings. You can adjust the color if you want to, or you can click the Preview check box to check out the results without changing the settings. FIGURE 4-7: Choose the Auto Color tool to automatically create a color balance. After you find the best combination, click OK or press Enter to apply the changes and close the dialog box.

DESCRIPTION: This application seeks to continue a program that has been funded in whole or in part since 1980. This program is focused on the clinical use of alternative, non-electrical energy sources (AENS) that may be used for the treatment of neurological disorders. Three broad objectives are described: 1) to enhance the knowledge base and clinical use of AENS by elucidating the mechanisms of their action and thereby improving our ability to direct the therapy; 2) to evaluate the safety of AENS, working especially in aged subjects and patients of advanced age, including the investigation of the possible mechanisms by which AENS might be harmful; and 3) to elucidate the mode of action of the AENS through a more precise understanding of the bioelectric processes underlying the AENS. A small group of AENS are used in this research program, including transcranial direct current stimulation, transcutaneous nerve stimulation, low-level laser and magnetic stimulation, acupuncture, and interferential current therapy.Q: simple aggregation Can anybody explain to me how this works : #A select that returns :
