Catacombs of St. Pius X The Catacombs of St. Pius X are subterranean halls located in the Vatican which were used as a house of prayer and a cemetery of saints of the Catholic Church for over 1,000 years. History The earliest direct accounts of these catacombs are from 1268, when they were used as a main burial place for members of the Franciscans. In 1278 they were used for the burial of a series of Franciscan martyrs who were thought to be saints. In 1350 Pope Clement VI took the place of the first Franciscan martyrs. Later it was used to bury a number of popes, including Pius IX. The largest chapel in the catacombs, the Santa Maria del Popolo, was built for John XXIII. On the feast of the Holy Cross (May 13, 1986) the Catholic Church's prefect for the Congregation of Rites blessed the remains of Venerable Servant of God Anthony de Mello, blessed by Pope John Paul II in recognition of 648931e174
