Here is the code that I use to get the information from the user: function textinput(callback){ document.getElementById('username').focus(); document.getElementById('username').onkeypress = function(){ callback(this); } } The code works for regular text inputs and I would like to know if there's a way to use same function for different data types. I've been trying to use Object.defineProperty but I don't know how to make it work with Object.defineProperty. A: The callback type is not important. What you have here is a functional pattern that functions well on any context, including DOM elements: function textinput(callback){ document.getElementById('username').focus(); document.getElementById('username').onkeypress = callback; } If you want to use a different callback for different types of inputs, you'll need to assign a specific callback function based on a class or type: function textinput(callback) { if ('text' in this) { this.onkeypress = callback; } } function numberinput(callback) { if ('number' in this) {

`this.onkeypress = callback; } }` If you don't want to split it up into multiple function, this: `function textinput(callback){ document.getElementById('username').focus(); document.getElementById('username').onkeypress = callback; } (assuming`
